If you have taken home and family life for subjects, add trade life now. No one liveth unto himself, should be the thought that runs through all, and doth all unite. The busy workman labors for his family; the blacksmith is a father also, who goes on Sunday to the church and sits among his boys. Shall not the child learn that in the outside world it is in acting well his part that all honor lies Lead him to discover and believe in the universal brotherhood of man. We cannot represent all trades; which ones shall we select Kindergartners say, choose typical ones, not trivial ones; choose those that show cause and effect, relation and 96 interdependence, cure being taken to select those best adapted to the needs of your own individual children, and those that can be best illustrated in your...
