He sees very clearly and shows very vividly that a sustained and general attempt to bring in the reign of equality would require even a more prodigious effort than the audacious Jacobins made in their four years memorable adventure into chaos; that it would lead to universal poverty, and that it could only last for a day. So far as to the general aim and tendency of Bentham's utilitarian philosophy. Let us enter now into some of the details of his chief hook, the principle of utility, and first let us regard the main ends of government. The true aim of law and government, of the enlightened statesman and legislator, is the greatest happiness of the governed; and as to this, with certain qualifications, political philosophers are largely agreed. And wherein consists their happiness? Bentham, according to Bentham, in four things---subsistence, abundance, equality, and, above all, security; namely security, liberty, civil and political, being included. The end of the civil laws should be these four things, and of these four chiefly security, the protection of the person and of property, the fruit of the labourer's exertions. As to subsistence, no laws are required; the sole sanction alone, the natural consequences, sustenance or starvation, are amply adequate to induce men to labour, provided only that the fruits of labour are secured to the labourer by the laws against spoilers (including the rapacity of the...
